

Exciting new

POSTGRADUATE COURSE

from CSU

The School of Public Health at Charles Sturt University will offer the Master of Emergency Management to emergency management professionals from July 1999.

Offered by two years distance education study, students do not have to attend the University.

Students are provided with quality educational material to study at home.

The Master of Emergency Management is the only postgraduate course offered in this field of study in Australia. The strong application base of the course has a significant impact on the students' workplace as they relate their assignments to the real-life situations in their place of work or community.

If you are interested in the opportunity to study the latest advances in emergency management, for further information please contact:
