NAME CHANGE TO 'AUSTRALIAN EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT'

The Australian Government Minister responsible for national emergency management and disaster resilience is the Minister for Emergency Management, the Hon Robert McClelland MP. To reflect the change in portfolio, the URL and name of the Australian government's emergency management website has also changed.

The website is now called Australian Emergency Management and the new URL is www.em.gov.au

This website is the key online access point for emergency management information from the Australian Government.

The site provides information about Australian and regional emergency management, in a national security context, including content on policy formulation, national emergency operations and development of national and international capability.
