And they ripped yarns

The Administrator (pictured above) must have been telling the one about the trapeze artist who left the lion tamer -- before certain things were compulsory -- and the dreadful time his Honour had convincing the husband to come forth with maintenance payments under the Matrimonial Causes Act.

His Honour was joined by the Solicitor-General, Tom Pauling QC, and a past president of the Queensland Law Society, Ray Rinaudo.

Each had a maximum of ten minutes in which to rip.

Extraordinary though it was, every time one of the yarn spinners made a reference to sex, a deathly quiet was cast upon the restaurant.

Ripping Yarns was such as success that it may well become the annual Law Week luncheon event.

This year's lunch marked the 25th anniversary of the Law Society and we were fortunate to have had a variety of door prizes and a massive cake which the Attorney-General was bestowed the honour of cutting.

Is it true that certain of our number arrived home from lunch at 2.30am?
