Financial Planning Association Complaints Resolution Scheme

When consumers of financial services allege they have been given inappropriate or inadequate advice they may seek redress but it is more likely they will head for one of a number of alternative dispute resolution mechanisms.

Since the establishment of the Banking Ombudsman six years ago and the close scrutiny of the financial services sector by the media, consumer movement and, of course, regulators, a number of ADR schemes have been set up.

In early 1995 the Complaints Resolution Scheme of the Financial Planning Association was established to resolve complaints received from clients of financial planners. 320 financial planning firms are principal members of the Financial Planning Association and they and their representatives are members of the FPA's Complaints Resolution Scheme which operates independently and is administered by a council.

The scheme provides a free service to the client, is independent and has the power to investigate complaints concerning breaches of the FPA's Code of Ethics and Rules of Professional Conduct and to compensate clients up to $50,000 in financial loss, which may be extended to $100,000

ASC Forms on Disk

The Australian Securities Commission has recently produced an interactive form preparation and compliance tool.

Known as ASC Forms on Disk, this innovation enables the user to key in details and ensures, by its annual subscription service, that that the current form is always used.

The package incorporates 77% of all forms lodged at the ASC and provides comprehensive help screens.

Included with the package is a users' manual which lists all forms and current lodgement fees and deadlines.
