

Courtroom Comedy

Three days into a criminal trial in Alice Springs recently, one of the jurors asked to be excused from further service due to an unanticipated intestinal disorder. Having discharged the juror, the learned trial Judge turned to the reserve juror and said:

"So, Mr. Reserve Juror, you're now part of the jury proper. Promotion at last!"

Unable to contain his glee or perhaps wanting the last word on the subject, Mr. Reserve Juror replied: "Does that mean I'm off the bench and on the field?"

Congratulations

Congratulations must go to Stephen Southwood for achieving Silk in December 2000.

Lawyer Joke

It has been a while since Muster Room ran a lawyer joke, so at the risk of a few groans, here's one that turned up on our desk:

What do you get when you cross the Godfather with a lawyer?

An offer you can't understand.

NZ lawyers more trustworthy?

Lawyers in New Zealand must have some talents that their counterparts here in Australia are lacking.

According to a report in the New Zealand Law Society's journal LawTalk (553, 4 December 2000), NZ lawyers were ranked 16th on a list of 23 'most trusted professions' in a survey of 2300 Readers Digest readers.

A similar survey carried out in Australia listed lawyers further down the list at 18.

Making up the top five most trusted professionals/organisations in New Zealand were pilots at number one, followed by nurses, pharmacists, the police and defence forces.

Politicians were last on the list while other least trusted professions were car salesmen, marketers, journalists and psychologists.

Does size matter?

In case you missed the humorous

The Muster Room

anecdote in the NT News' NT and Beyond on 1 December 2000, Muster Room thought you might enjoy the following repartee between Law Society President and Darwin Magistrate Greg Cavenagh:

"Barrister Jon Tippet, eloquent but known for being a bit on the long-winded side in court, represented Paul Crossin... At the end of his plea he told Magistrate Greg Cavenagh" "That's it in a nutshell, your Worship." "It wasn't a nutshell," said Mr Cavenagh. Mr Tippet, spreading his arms, said: "Perhaps a large walnut?"

Emily Caldwell has been recently admitted as a solicitor at Clayton Utz in Darwin.

Background: I have lived in Darwin since I was fifteen years old, completed an Arts Degree and graduated in law in 2000.

Why did you want to go into law? I studied constitutional and administrative law as a unit in my Arts degree and then decided to study law.

What do you see are the key issues facing Australia in the new century? • Which constitutional model Australia should adopt. • E-commerce and Australia's position in the international economy • Regulation of multi-national corporations.

What is your ideal sort of holiday? Sweden in mid-winter.

Where do you go for your regular hit of coffee? The kitchen at work.

Complete this sentence: I couldn't live without ... my daughter.

If you were given a $50 voucher to spend what would you buy? Books.

Name your top three all time favourite films. Schindlers List, Life of Brian and Thief of Baghdad.
