

Law Week 2003: Launch and Advocacy Booklet

Justice Trevor Riley's Little Red Book of Advocacy launch was the key event for the overall launch of Law Week 2003.

The booklet has been a labour of love for the judge and is a compilation of his Advocacy articles from Balance. It takes in the years 1999 to 2002 and is a valuable tool for any legal practitioner, both experienced or just starting out.

LSNT President Ian Morris quipped: "You'd be mad NOT to have the booklet on your table when appearing before his Honour".

Also a feature of the booklet – some special (and at times quite cutting) cartoons by local graphic artist Chips Mackinolty.

The booklet is available through the Law Society NT (see order form with this edition of Balance) but interested buyers are warned – the "red book" has been given a limited print run so you need to get your order in NOW!

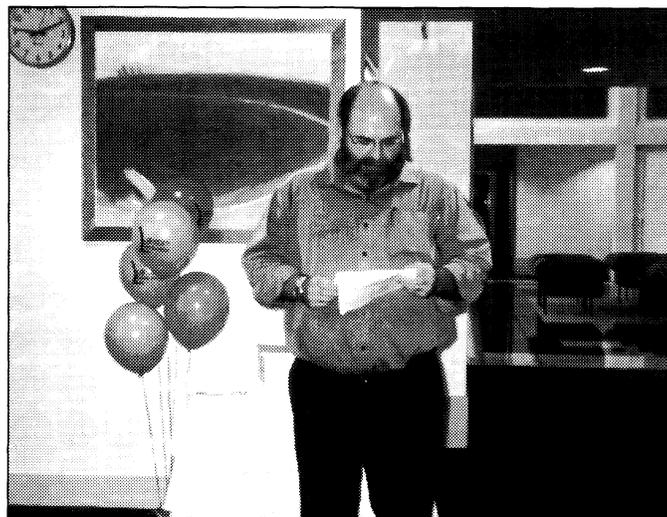

Photos (clockwise from above):

Northern Territory Attorney-General Peter Toyne launches the booklet and Law Week 2003.

His Honour Justice Riley (seated right) and Chips Mackinolty sign copies at the launch.

LSNT President Ian Morris speaking at the launch, which was held at the Supreme Court of the Northern Territory.

Justice Riley and his unashamed fan club – wife Jan (right) and daughter Jennifer (left).

Law Week 2003: Chief Justice's XI vs LSNT President's XI

The legal profession proved its mettle with the willow at the inaugural Law Week cricket match between the Chief Justice's XI and the Law Society NT President's XI.

There were some starring moments (Magistrate Dick Wallace was awarded Most Valuable Player, taking 4/8 off two overs and scoring 1/12 with the bat) and there were some bloody awful moments (see Muster Room, page 19).

But all-in-all it was a super match and a great day.

The match has, of course, been played in the past but this was the first time in many years it had featured and the Society is determined to make it a permanent fixture in the Law Week calendar.

The Chief Justice's XI won the No Appeals trophy. They were captained by Justice Dean Mildren and included: Daniel Garton, Rex Wild QC, Ben Wild, Justice Trevor Riley, Master Terry Coulehan, Jessica Bates, Roberta McMurtrie, Duncan Maclean, Chris Rowe, Jennifer Laurence and magistrates Daynor Trigg, Vince Luppino and Dick Wallace.

The President's XI were captained by LSNT president Ian Morris and included: Bill Piper, Michael Davis, Glen Dooley, Bill Priestley, Tanya Fong Lim, Cathy Spurr, Attorney-General Peter Toyne, Sandra Robinson, Megan Lennie, Michael Grant, Alan Woodcock, John Munn and Michael Grove.

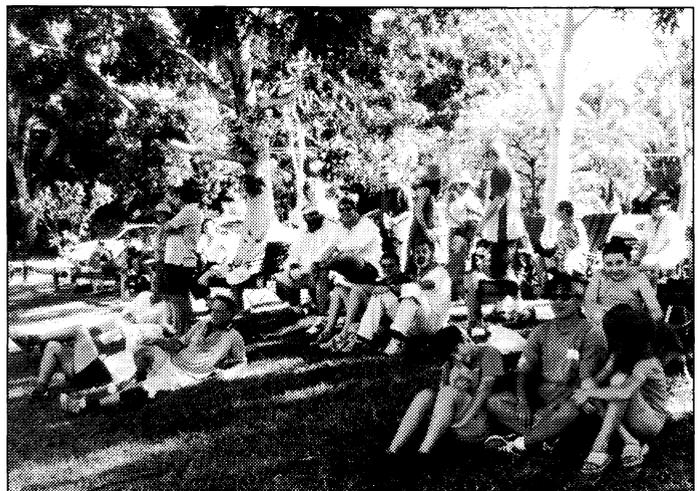

Umpires were non-legal-types (for good reason!) led by NT Cricket Association director Neville Jones with David Boyd and Chips Mackinolty. Scorer was the Palmerston Cricket Club president Neil Dibbs.

Photos (clockwise from above right):
Everyone's a winner! Both teams put their rivalries aside for a group photo.

Tensions in the Morris camp as they watch their bats-people fall.

Victory for the Chief Justice's XI.

The Chief Justice Brian Martin (left) presenting the trophy to...wellllll....his team captain, Justice Dean Mildren!

Law Week 2003: Lunches

It may sound clichéd but Alice Springs funny lady Fiona O'Loughlin DID have 'em rolling in the aisles at both Law Week lunches for the profession.

The Alice Springs lunch was an "intimate" affair with a small but keen crowd getting into the celebration mood while the Darwin lunch was booked out with the Parliament House venue quaking with laughter as Fiona did her stuff.

Also at the Darwin lunch was the presentation of the biennial Law Society Award for Contribution to the Community which acknowledges pro bono work by an individual or firm for a community organisation (see For the Record, page 6).

Photos (clockwise from above):

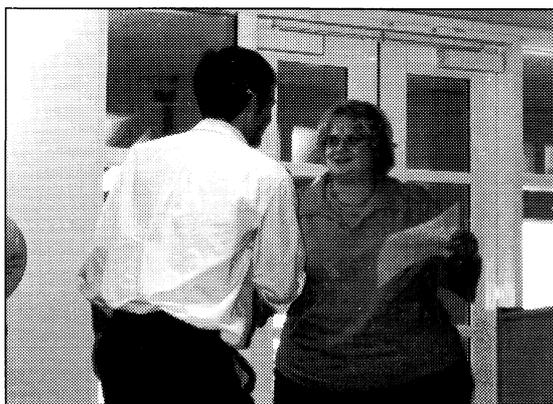

Laughing it up at the Darwin lunch.

Nanette Hunter (left) wins the door prize in Darwin – a trip for two to Cairns donated by Qantas. Presenting the prize is Qantas' Nicola Haynes (right).

Fiona O'Loughlin on stage in Darwin.

Fiona and "friends" hamming it up in Alice Springs.

LSNT vice president Merran Short presents NT Legal Aid's Jonathan Kneebone with the award for Contribution to the Community.

Law Week 2003: Crime Tours, Info Display, Supreme Court Open Day

It's never a dull moment during Law Week, with plenty of activities on offer for both the public and the profession.

Photos (clockwise from above left): There were plenty of bookings for the bus Crime Tours around Darwin, each night was booked out.

Crime Tour host Bill Wilson from the NTU. (Standing) Suzan Cox goes through her case in the Mock Trial at the Supreme Court Open Day.

Tony Buckland presenting the NT Young Lawyers' Small Claims Workshop at the Open Day.

Interested visitors to the information stall which included Neighbourhood Watch and the Office of Crime Prevention.

