

Indigenous Legal Issues Hypothetical (Darwin)

Justice Reeves introduces Facilitator Michael O'Donnell and Hypothetical panel members

An Indigenous Legal Issues Hypothetical discussion was held on the first day of Law Week, 26 May, at the Museum Amphitheatre.

Fiona Hussin of Northern Territory Legal Aid Commission did a wonderful job creating a fictional family affected by the Intervention. Michael O'Donnell of Charles Darwin University facilitated the event, Justice Reeves provided an introduction, and an expert panel provided a range of interesting perspectives on the Intervention.

Interested persons can obtain free audio or video of the Hypothetical by contacting Rebecca on 8981 5104.

Fiona Davis (TEWLS), Tony Fitzgerald (Anti Discrimination Commissioner) and Helen Wodak (NAAJA)

David Dalrymple and Commander Greg Dowd of NT Police

Community Legal Education

Members of the legal profession were extremely generous with their time in conducting community legal education sessions during Law Week.

Barrister Mark Johnson (pictured below left), received plenty of interest from local media with his 'Silencing Sensationalists' session, which looked at sentencing in the NT.

David De Silva's session 'Legal Considerations for Sporting Clubs' attracted 30 people, one of the best CLE attendances during Law Week.

The Schools Legal Forum attracted over 80 secondary students over two days. Kris Norrington (NTLAC), Charlotte Martin (DoJ), Caroline Heske (CDU) were some of the volunteers who contributed to this successful event.

Gail Fleay and Leonie Smith of the Public Trustee attracted a good turn-out for their session on wills (pictured right). Natalie Bruce of Morgan Buckley conducted a Temporary Business Visas session, Dr Celia Kemp a session about the role of the Coroner and Ippei Okazaki (Community Justice Centre) a session regarding mediation.

A big thank you to all who volunteered.

