

Environmental and Natural Resources Management by the Maori in New Zealand is part of this series. This paper provides an overview of the history of Maori settlement in New Zealand, their traditional systems of customary law and land ownership, and the dispossession which occurred with the arrival of the British colonists.

The paper explains the significance of the Waitangi Treaty (signed in 1840 by the Maori Chiefs and representatives of the British Crown) and how it was used by the New Zealand Government in the 19th and 20th centuries. In 1975 the Waitangi Tribunal was established to hear and inquire into Maori claims arising from the Treaty. The paper discusses the recent work of the Tribunal with land/fishery claims, as well as Maori interests in the mining industries.
