A non-claimant application (marked with an *) is one made by someone who is not claiming native title themselves but who has an interest in the area which is not a native title interest and they want the Federal Court to determine whether anyone has a native title interest in the same area. The location is meant to be indicative only.

For further information regarding notification of any of the applications listed contact the National Native Title Tribunal on 1800 640 501 or www.nntt.gov.au

Taking a Stand: Land Rights to Reconciliation by Robert Tickner, Allen & Unwin, 83 Alexander Street, Crows Nest, NSW 2065, $35.00. Minister for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Affairs from 1990 to 1996 under Labor Government, Tickner presents a measured description of the events to which he was party during the period. He precedes the body of the book with a detailed timeline and a short chapter on the historical context of the events. The book's theme is social justice through which Tickner presents the reconciliation movement, the establishment of ATSIC, the Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody, the land rights movement, Indigenous health and international scrutiny. Tickner readily acknowledges the cooperation of the Liberals under John Hewson and his Shadow Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Michael Wooldridge, particularly in their conscious attempts to avoid politicising the reconciliation movement and the passage of the NTA. The character of John Howard, Joh Bjelke-Petersen and the mining interests influencing the Western Australian and Northern Territory governments are criticised for their methods used to obstruct natural justice. The most exciting passage was description of ATSIC's Black Friday press conference which prevented the impending failure of the Keating government's resolve to leave the RDA intact and negotiate on the NTA.
