Tax relief plan for native title

Indigenous people who receive native title payments may no longer pay tax under radical proposals being floated by the Rudd government. The federal government has floated three different approaches to allow Aboriginal communities who receive native title funds to keep more money and use it to benefit their communities. One plan involves a tax exemption for all native title payments. The second involves the creation of a new tax-exempt entity, an Indigenous community fund, to deal with the taxation of benefits when they are used for a range of defined purposes that benefit Indigenous Australians, such as education. The third option allows the government to withhold an amount of tax before the payment goes to the native title holders. The rest of the payment would then be income tax exempt. Australian (National AU, 19 May 2010), 7.
