

CONTRIBUTORS

EILEEN BALDRY (PHD) is a Professor of Criminology in the School of Social Sciences and International Studies, UNSW where she has taught in the social policy, social and community development and criminology programs and has been Associate Dean (Education). She has researched with prisoners and people transitioning from prison regarding homelessness, mental and cognitive impairment and the particular experiences of women and Aboriginal people, and in social housing and Indigenous social work. Eileen is Chief Investigator on a number of ARC, NHMRC and agency research projects in these areas. LAURA VIDAL is a UNSW graduate from the School of Social Science and International Studies; graduating with a Bachelor of Social Work (Honours). Her Honours research addressed the current human trafficking policy in Australia and its link to the criminal justice system. Laura has been working with victims of human trafficking, slavery and slavery-like practices since 2009 and during this time has been involved in providing direct services to clients along with systemic advocacy, community education and training. Laura is a strong advocate for human rights and is trained in strengths-based social work practice, working with victims from a trauma informed theoretical base. LUKE GEARY is the managing partner of Salvos Legal. He received the Anzac of the Year Award in 2010 for his contribution to the community. KATHERINE GILCHRIST is a second year JD student from Canada. Her undergraduate major was in International Development Studies with a minor in Literature. During her undergraduate studies and in the three years between degrees, Katherine worked in various areas of community and international development in Uganda, Canada, Colombia, Bangladesh and Switzerland. NATHAN HUYNH is a second year Commerce/Law student and teaches Business & Economics Statistics for the Australian School of Business. He is a volunteer Legal Education Tutor, and has worked with various not-for-profit legal organisations through his positions in ALSA and the UNSW Law Society. This is his second contribution to Court of Conscience. SALLY DOWLING is a Sydney Crown Prosecutor. TAMANNA ISLAM is a fourth year Arts (Politics and International Relations)/Laws student. She has worked with the Centre for Refugee Research in the area of Women and Girls at Risk. She is interested in indigenous issues, protection of refugees and displaced persons, access to law, and the interaction between economic development and poverty alleviation. CLAIRE STIMPSON is in her second year of the Juris Doctor program, having previously completed her undergraduate studies in Arts and Social Science at the University of Queensland where she majored in Ancient History, Political Science and Policy. Claire completed her Honours in Ancient History in 2009 at the University of Sydney. PATTY VELIZ is currently completing a UNSW JD. Her commitment to social justice has led to a career in community development and public health. For over 10 years she has worked on programs in Australia, PNG, Peru and India advocating for cultural and sexual diversity, gender equality, and challenging class disparity. NICHOLAS COWDERY AM QC is a former Director of Public Prosecutions for NSW and now a Visiting Professorial Fellow at UNSW, Faculty of Law. SEAN BRENNAN is a Senior Lecturer and Director of the Indigenous Legal Issues Project at the Gilbert + Tobin Centre of Public Law, in the UNSW Law School. ANGELA KINTOMINAS is a fifth year Arts (Honours)/Law student at UNSW. Angela is passionate about migration and refugee law, and is fascinated by the complex negotiations between law, policy, media hype and IHL in the area. Angela enjoys intervarsity debating, and is currently on the Editorial Board of the UNSW Law Journal. SEBASTIAN QUINN-WATSON is an ideas fiend who wants to create a disruptively better world. His law study at UNSW is equipping him with skills to achieve this.