

DARWIN'S EXHIBITION

Professional librarians who are going to the LAA conference in Darwin this June won't be disappointed when they see the incredible range of products that will be on display at the Exhibition.

It is our responsibility to keep abreast of changes in product and information technology and the suppliers taking part are giving us the opportunity to do just that from Monday to Thursday of the conference. Fifty-five suppliers will be taking part, coming from every state and territory of Australia, as well as New Zealand, Italy, the USA, the Netherlands, West Germany and the United Kingdom.

We all like to feel that we are 'up with it' when it comes to computers and information processing systems, but systems are being improved all the time and suppliers to our industry have been specialising in developing library packages that are easy to use, easy to install and economical to run.

Exciting new hardware will also be on display. The MINX workstation from Datapoint is a video telephone that can be integrated with a computer to provide the most dynamic form of executive communication available. A hands on demonstration has been set up at the exhibit where we can explore the possibilities of face-to-face decision support with our peers.

Developments in other areas are just as exciting, including office landscaping, efficient storage systems and the latest in office furniture. Publishers and subscription agents have new products to present. They will also have important executives to meet. Executives who can listen to your suggestions and requests and take action to make those ideas take shape.

Over the next two years we are all going to have to make important purchasing decisions for our libraries. We will not find a better forum to look at the available alternatives than this outstanding exhibition.

Don't be left behind! See you in Darwin in June.
