

On the Government Publications front

Peter Clayton, the LAA's representative on the AGPS-AACOBS Liaison Committee reports on recent developments in this area.

Parliamentary papers

Many librarians will have been concerned at the proposals recommended by the Commonwealth Parliament's Joint Committee on Publications regarding the bound Parliamentary Papers series. (Australia Parliament Joint Committee on Publications Review of the costs and distribution of the Parliamentary Papers series. Tabled on 26 November 1986, but not ordered to be printed.)

These proposals are: that reserve stocks no longer be maintained; and that bound copies no longer be sent free of charge to Commonwealth Departments, Municipal libraries, Universities, Colleges of Advanced Education, Commonwealth Parliament Offices, and some overseas libraries.

So far no decision has been made but the government is hoping to make an announcement during June. Anyone concerned at these recommendations should make representations to John Brown, Minister for Sport, Recreation and Tourism (not to the Joint Committee). It would be most unfortunate if some of these libraries were to receive only single copies of the unbound papers, especially as most make their unbound issues publicly available on receipt, risking possible loss.

More encouraging is the news that the Commonwealth Parliament is considering producing microfiche sets of the Parliamentary Papers and of Hansard covering the period from Federation to well after the Second World War. Such sets should be of special value to libraries whose bound volumes are badly worn or incomplete.

AALC

At its March meeting the Australian Government Publishing Service (AGPS) — AACOBS Liaison Committee was informed of many changes taking place at AGPS itself and to its publications. Frank Thompson is now responsible for AGPS marketing as well as publishing, and AGPS is generally adopting a more commercial thrust. As well as marketing publications they are now marketing their services to the government community. These changes have been assisted by the re-location of all AGPS staff under one roof. The establishment of AGPS Press is an outcome of this changing emphasis.

Electronic publishing

Frank Thompson advised the Committee that AGPS was chairing a government committee looking at electronic publishing and which was expected to make a submission to Cabinet later this year.

AGPS itself is considering the establishment of an 'out-of-print publication on demand service', based on laser printing from optical disc. This could be especially useful in areas such as legislation. It would be offered at AGPS bookshops.

The Commonwealth directory will be made available online, probably from July, through a commercial agency with whom a contract has been signed. It will continue to be published in hard copy, but now twice a year. The next edition is due in June. The freedom of information details formerly published in association with the Directory will in future be produced as part of departmental and agency annual reports.

The Commonwealth record may be made available online alongside the Directory; hard copy publication of this is however at risk because of the short print run. The 1986 index to the Record has just been published; the 1985 has still not been completed due to staff shortages. (AGPS decided to give priority to indexing the more recent information.)

The AGPS' marketing catalogue is to be made available through ACI's BOOKNET service. (Note that this includes only material listed in the monthly catalogues, not the full coverage of the weekly lists.)

AGPS Publications

Other AGPS publications discussed included the 1986 Annual catalogue. This is currently in press, and because of its size is likely to cost about $40. AGPS sought advice on the desirability of producing it only in microfiche format in future: how would this affect you? Your advice and comment would be welcomed.

The Style manual will appear in 1988 over the AGPS Press imprint; it will incorporate major changes and is to be continuously revised thereafter.

It is proposed that the Gazette be self-supporting from July, with departments and agencies paying to advertise in it, and paying for copies received. The Freedom of Information issues ceased with No. 46, the Social Security issue of 31 December 1986, but the General series is to be split into government notices and a business gazette, so returning the Gazette to eight series. Staff shortages have precluded indexing it and the last index is still January-June 1985.

Other matters

The Secretary of AALC tabled a report on the operation of the free issue scheme to University libraries, and revised guidelines and objectives of the deposit and free issue scheme (copies of these are available from me). Not all free issue recipients had responded to the request for a report; those which did found most material received very valuable. The main problem reported was that of consignment lists. Some problems of non-receipt of loose-leaf items in particular were raised at the meeting.

The Committee asked AGPS to consider the practicability of an Australian statement on Crown copyright and photocopying. The United Kingdom statement was tabled.

The value of the Committee as a formal channel for communication from AGPS to the library community is very apparent, particularly at a time when AGPS is itself undergoing so many changes. However the Publishing Service is also looking to AALC to provide feedback to it on 'problems of provision of access to Australian government publications, including their bibliographic control and distribution'. Any comments on Commonwealth government publication issues would be welcomed by me c/- Canberra College of Advanced Education (062) 52-2246; by Ann Miller, La Trobe University (03) 478-3122 ext. 2943; or by the Secretary of AALC, Michael Harrington AGPS, (062) 95-4655.

The future for Commonwealth government publications seems very likely to be one where the emphasis is on cost recovery and commercial viability, and where the publications and services on which libraries and their clients rely are re-evaluated in this light. In such a climate there may well be increased value in a forum such as AALC provides.

Peter Clayton
LAA Representative, AALC

DIRECTORY OF COLLECTION STRENGTHS

Arranged in Dewey order containing some 400 entries covering 97 libraries throughout Victoria. The major state, academic, public and special libraries are represented.

An annotated list of related directories, information on published selection policies, a list of names and addresses of contributing libraries, subject and institutional indexes we included.

PRICE: $20 LAA MEMBERS!
$30 non-members
$3 Postage

Directory of Collection Strengths in Victorian Libraries — Edited by John Thawley and Philip Kent.

ISBN 0 86804 144 0

in Victorian libraries

Library Association of Australia
376 Jones Street, Ultimo NSW 2007

Please supply copy/copies of Directory of Collection Strengths in Victorian Libraries.

Payment to the value of is enclosed.

Bankcard/Visacard No

Signature

Name/Organisation

Address

Postcode LAA Membership No

LAST CALL FOR SPECIAL LIBRARIANS

— It's your last chance to have your vital statistics included (or updated) in the LAA's Directory of Australian Special Libraries (DIASL). Ring Jo-anne Fuller on (02) 692 9233 or (008) 22 1481 if you need an entry-data form or with vital update information now!

REACH OUT. To reach a variety of librarians and information workers in a specialised market — advertise in InCite. It's simple and effective. To find out how simple and effective contact: Kathy Husseibe (02) 692 9233.

... And don't forget about the LAA's book clearance sale. Libraries after 1984; Readings in School Librarianship; Information Online 86; and National Interlending Conference reduced to only $5. Plus if you buy two of these titles you receive 10% off any other LAA title.