

Perth 1990

First the words, now the pictures

The ubiquitous Max Borchardt (disguised as a photographer) was flashing at any Conference-goer who was careless enough to catch his eye. From a huge selection of his candid camera studies — the serious, the scurrilous and the frankly libellous — we have selected these four to epitomise happy times in Perth. Our apologies both to those who represent all their colleagues on this page, and to those featured in the 140 snaps for which we have no space.

FLAA/FALIA and ALAA/AALIA

*Librarians here in Australia
Are mostly Associates of ALIA
But if they aspire
To anything higher
They risk ending up as a FALIA*

ALIA National Office still receives queries from members about the correct use of these initials. It may be helpful to repeat the advice, published last year in inCite. General Council resolved that, as the Association was granted a Supplemental Royal Charter on 31 December 1988, and its name changed from Library Association of Australia to Australian Library and Information Association, Fellows and Associates of the 'LAA' could choose to adopt the post nominal letters FALIA or AALIA, or to remain as FLAA or ALAA. ■
