

The Library Online Challenge

State Library of Queensland shares knowledge (and prizes) in LIW

To celebrate Library and Information Week (LIW), the State Library of Queensland presents the Library Online Challenge. The Challenge consists of six questions, all of which can be answered by using the State Library's subject gateways to web resources — QueenslandWeb and NetLinks.

Questions are structured to demonstrate the scope of the databases and the different ways of finding information — searching across both databases. The Library Online Challenge is open to all; however the prize can only be won by an Australian resident.

State Library of Queensland invites you to take up the Library Online Challenge. Let your clients know that they can be in the running to win a major prize (more in the next issue of inCite).

Share your knowledge with us and with your clients by: promoting the Library Online Challenge in your community during Library and Information Week; contributing to QueenslandWeb and NetLinks through our 'suggest a site' forms. Queensland library staff can become formal contributors for their local regions.

The Challenge opens with LIW on Monday, 14 May, and will be drawn on Queensland Day, Wednesday, 6 June.

If you have any questions about the Library Online Challenge, or would like a graphic for your website, or other promotional material contact the QueenslandWeb manager, qldweb@slq.qld.gov.au.

QueenslandWeb: an index of Queensland websites described and indexed by library staff, <http://www.slq.qld.gov.au/qldweb.htm>.

NetLinks: an index of authoritative, quality internet sites selected across a wide range of subjects and evaluated by skilled librarians — <http://netlinks.slq.qld.gov.au>. ■

Personal e-mail and copyright

Contrary to alarmist media reports, sharing e-mail is not banned by law.

Amendments to the Copyright Act that came into effect last month do not outlaw the practice of forwarding personal e-mails to other people.

The Copyright Amendment (Digital Agenda) Act updates copyright law to ensure it provides the same protections in an electronic environment as exist for hard copy. For example, musicians whose music is distributed online without their permission will be able to take action to stop it, in the same way as they can if pirate CDs are sold over the counter.

Forwarding a personal e-mail is unlikely to breach copyright laws. A court would need to find that the contents of the e-mail were an 'original literary work'. For example, if the e-mail was simply a joke that everyone had been re-hashing for years, it is doubtful it would have the necessary originality to be protected by copyright. Similarly, a casual exchange of personal information would probably not be original enough to attract copyright.

The Digital Agenda Act will continue to allow users, especially libraries and educational institutions, reasonable access to copyright material through new communications technologies. It will not impose hefty penalties on everyday users of personal e-mail. ■

NB. No books (or librarians!) were harmed during the making of this digitally enhanced advertisement

How to fossick for out-of-print and collectable books?

Introducing BiblioOZ.com: Your Booksearch Wizard! This new Australian-based online service enables you and your library to search and easily purchase from among more than 10 million out-of-print and antiquarian books.

Check out <http://www.biblioqz.com> for the following features:

- One reliable source for access to the stock of almost 3,000 bookdealers worldwide including dozens within Australia and New Zealand
- Simplify your OP title purchases and paperwork by ordering from ONE GST-registered supplier
- Reduce shipping costs through our weekly consolidated air freight from North America and the UK with big discounts for multiple book orders
- Save specialised search criteria so you can quickly view the most recent items listed since your last visit
- Use Power Search to find what you want by author, title, keyword, book location, price range, edition, publisher and many other attribute fields
- Purchase in Australian dollars with credit card directly via the National Bank's Secure Internet Payment Service or print out a form to fax or post
- Check the status of current and previous orders online anytime
- Guaranteed by BiblioQuest International, Australasia's leading search service for out-of-print and collectable books since 1994

BIBLIOQUEST®
INTERNATIONAL
ABN: 84 314 009 214

FOR MORE INFORMATION www.biblioquest.com.au OR PHONE FREECALL 1800 067 877