Graduation 2001

Library Studies Unit, Adelaide Institute of TAFE

Forty-three students formally graduated at this ceremony. This number included the first group of trainees (10) to complete the Certificate II from the new training package and the final group (18) to complete the 'old' pre-training package Diploma in Library and Information Studies.

Since AITAFE is currently the only South Australian provider of these courses, the graduates came from a very broad geographic area, from Bordertown in the South East of the state to Yaninee in the heart of the Eyre Peninsula.

In fact it was the Yaninee graduate, Susan Denton, who won the ALIA award for Graduate of the Year. Sue who works in the Wudinna school/community library achieved this award and made outstanding use of the resources within her own library as well as resources which were accessible to her online. For example, her research project tapped into a impressive and wide ranging resources in a variety of media as those of other students who are university based.

The ALIA Acquisitions SA prize for acquisitions related work was awarded to another country student, Jan Ward, who lives in Tanunda and works in the TAFE campus library at Nuriootpa.

This was clearly an outstanding year for country students as the final prize, the AITAFE Council Prize was shared by Marilyn Brown, who also lives and works in the Barossa Valley, and Susan Isted who lives in the Adelaide metropolitan area.

All of these students had at least a part of their course delivered off-campus with delivery technologies including print, videoconference, teleconference and online (using WebCT). Like the modern library at Wudinna, the modern TAFE course need not be confined within a central physical location. ■

Education and training community shape Australia's biggest learning technology exhibition

11–13 August 2002, Melbourne Exhibition Centre

More than 5000 education and training professionals will trial new technologies and access ICT advice from their peers at Edutech 2002, Australia's biggest learning technology exhibition.

Principals and teachers from Victoria's leading ICT schools have devised a cutting-edge professional development program for this year's show, which demonstrates how technology can enhance teaching and learning outcomes in the primary, secondary and VET sectors.

Ringwood Secondary College Principal Michael Phillips, from the Innovation and Excellence Network, is chairing the professional development advisory board for the event. Board members include educators from the Victorian IT Teachers Association, ICT in Education Victoria, the School Library Association Victoria, TAFE Frontiers and the Australian Principals Centre.

Edutech's renewed focus on classroom basics has also attracted some of the best exhibitors and presenters in Australia. Household names Microsoft, Acer and IBM will be showcasing their latest education and training applications at the show, as well as Electroboard, Lexmark, WebCT, Citrix, Macromedia, Edsoft and DE&T.

Edutech manager Ryan Percy said strong partnerships with the education and training community ensured Edutech was on track and would have something to offer all educators.

Other attractions include an Education Online area facilitated by EdNA and an Edsoft Interactive Zone where visitors can trial a huge range of educational software titles. Students will also play a role, with Mornington Secondary College students installing a wireless network as part of the State Government's ICT Achiever program.

Edutech will feature thirteen keynote presentations, twenty-two computer workshops and forty-eight presentations of benchmark ICT practice delivered by educators for educators. Admission is free and registration details are available at <http://www.edutechshow.com>.
