

Challenging ideas...

ALIA 2004 Biennial Conference, 21–24 September 2004,
Gold Coast Convention and Exhibition Centre, Queensland

The ALIA 2004 program committee is pleased to announce three eminent keynote speakers to present at the conference. Professor Glyn Davis, vice-chancellor of Griffith University, Mr Bob Hayward, senior vice-president of Gartner, and Professor Martin Nakata, director of Indigenous Academic Programs at the University of Technology Sydney have all kindly agreed to share their expertise with delegates and will each bring a wealth of knowledge and experience guaranteed to Challenge ideas.

Over the coming months we will feature speakers in inCite — this month we will focus on Professor Martin Nakata and Mr Bob Hayward.

Martin Nakata is director of Indigenous Academic Programs at Jumbunna Indigenous House of Learning, University of Technology, Sydney. He is the first Torres Strait Islander to graduate with PhD in an Australian university. His previous work and academic interests in indigenous education issues and his research interest in Indigenous knowledge areas span twenty-three years. He has presented fourteen plenary and keynote addresses at national and international conferences in five different countries. His work is widely published in anthologies, academic journals, edited books and national newspapers.

Bob Hayward is senior vice-president and Research Fellow (Asia Pacific and Japan) for Gartner. He has more than twenty-five years experience in the information technology industry, working in Europe, the United States of America and in the Asia-Pacific region at various senior levels within the software industry. Gartner is the world's largest and most prestigious information technology research and strategic consulting company.

Bob travels globally meeting with senior executives in the information technology industry, as well as with the boards of major public companies and senior regional politicians. He is a regular speaker at conferences and seminars. Bob is frequently quoted in the media, including national newspapers and regional business magazines.
